

One Dragon, Three Models

The exact prompt behind the flying dragon comparison, tested on Seedance 2.0, Gemini Omni Flash and Kling 3.0 — plus what each model costs and what each one is best at.

01

Seedance 2.0~$0.30/s

The most cinematic motion of the three: aggressive banking, snow mist physics, real chase-cam energy. Run it on fal.ai or Replicate at 720p. Turn audio generation off if you plan to add your own music.

02

Gemini Omni Flash~$0.13/s

The most detailed dragon: ember wing membranes, armor texture, dramatic wide wingspan framing. It is a fal.ai exclusive — Replicate does not host it. 3 to 10 second clips.

03

Kling 3.0~$0.08/s

The cheapest of the three and the best environment: deep canyon walls, layered fog, huge sense of scale. Standard tier without audio is $0.084 per second, so this clip cost about 67 cents.

The exact prompt (same one for all three models)

Copy

Cinematic aerial chase shot: an armored rider on a massive black dragon with glowing ember-orange wing membranes, banking hard between towering snow-covered granite cliffs, snow mist trailing off the wingtips, camera flying just behind and above the dragon, fast dynamic motion, volumetric cold alpine light, photorealistic fantasy film still, epic scale.
